

This Week's Service

Sunday, January 9, at 10:30 am on Zoom

Join Rev. David, Worship Associate Lola Davis-Jones, and Musician Nancy Byrne on Zoom for this week's service: "A Table Set in Ice and Starlight". We often describe winter as a fallow time, a pause between the active seasons of growing and harvest. Today we'll consider this austere season as a gift in its own right.

Rev. David's Quote of the Week

Theologian Howard Thurman (1899 - 1981) wrote:

"There is a quiet courage that comes from an inward spring of confidence in the meaning and significance of life. Such courage is an underground river, flowing far beneath the shifting events of one's experience, keeping alive a thousand little springs of action. It has neither trumpet to announce it nor crowds to applaud; it is best seen in the lives of men and women who do their work from day to day without hurry and without fever. It is the patient waiting of the humble ones whose integrity keeps their spirits sweet and their hearts strong. Wherever one encounters it, a lift is given to life and vast reassurance invades one's being. To walk with such a person in the daily round is to keep company with angels."

Have you ever known someone who filled you with the sort of energy and reassurance Thurman describes, someone who makes you feel you're "keeping company with angels?" He doesn't mean this description to apply only to extraordinary, heroic people. Each of us has the chance to let integrity "keep [our] spirits sweet and [our] hearts strong." What will help you with that today?
